OBITUARY.

TYLER—Anna V. Tyler, daughter of George A. and Emma K. Tyler, of Tyler Hill, died on Tuesday, Dec. 21, at 2 p. m. of spinal meningitis. For nearly six years Anna had been the joy and comfort of the home, for her sweet childish presence brought a wealth of sunshine and happiness into the lives of those who knew her. We feel the emptiness of human words in time of bitter sorrow. Yet "He who has borne our griefs and carried our sorrows" will comfort and sustain. The funeral services will be held to-day (Friday) at the Damascus Methodist church, and interment made in the church cemetery.

SMITH—Henry D. Smith, one of our well known citizens, died on Wednesday morning at his home on lower Main street, aged fifty-eight years. They got so drunk over their first Christmas tree her away from home that Washington captured them, and that started the fashion of Christmas trees in America. It's history."

"JUST BOB BLAKE,"

"The Traveling Salesman" will be here next Monday night. No better comedy entertainment has ever been offered in this place than this tremendous footlighting of a phase of "modern drummer life" that seems to appeal to all classes. Austin Webb, Dan Baker, Joseph Sullivan, Gideon Burton and Jack L. Newton, the five jovial and mirth-provoking drummers will display a choice line of laughs and conversational sunshine, and Rosalind Coghlan, as the ingenuous and lovable ticket agent; Harriet Sheldon in the role of the modern Xantippe but with a heart as good as gold—in fact, the entire company, without exception, give splendid interpretations to Mr. Forbes' interesting stage characters. There are no slow starts in "The Traveling Salesman." It goes from the jump, and the poker game is the best the stage has ever offered. Every indication points to a crowded house for "The Traveling Salesman" which ran for an entire season at the Gaiety Theatre, New York.

Stopping the "Fire Wagon."

When the first railroad was laid over the western plains and the cars began running to San Francisco the Indians viewed the locomotive from the hilltops at a distance, not daring to come nearer the "fire wagon." A train of cars was to them "heap wagon, no hoss." An Apache chief gathered a party of warriors in Arizona and went several hundred miles to see the terrible fire wagon that whistled louder than the eagle's scream and poured out dense black smoke. W. M. Thayer says in his "Marvels of the New West" that the Redskins grew bolder and once attacked a fire wagon, expecting to capture it. When they failed and many were injured they said, "Fire wagon bad medicine!"

The Indians stretched a lariat across the track, breast high, each end being held by thirty braves.

"When the engineer first saw it he didn't know what on earth was the matter," said the narrator, "but in a minute more he burst out laughing. He caught hold of that throttle, and he opened her out."

"He struck that lariat going about forty miles an hour, and he just piled those braves up everlasting promiscuous."
